

NEWS FROM SHARSHERET

JULY 2025

When Liz Rose aka @JewishlyLiz began sharing her decision to undergo a prophylactic mastectomy, her raw and real posts about surgery, recovery, and family struck a chord. After connecting with Sharsheret, she shared an unboxing of Sharsheret support resources and kits—robe, mastectomy supplies, and a Busy Box for her kids—on her Instagram story.

Watch the unboxing and see how one story—and Sharsheret's resources—can make a life-changing difference.

Help Another Woman Find Her Doctor

You know how overwhelming it can feel to navigate a new diagnosis. One of the most important—and most personal—steps is finding the right doctor.

At Sharsheret, we want to connect women with peer supporters who have been there before—women who can share what it was like to work with specific oncologists, surgeons, plastic surgeons, radiologists, genetic counselors, nutritionists, and more.

That's where you come in.

By sharing the names of the healthcare professionals who helped guide your journey, you'll help someone else feel more confident and supported as she builds her own team.

When someone wants to speak with a peer who saw your doctor, we'll reach out to you. Your insight can be the missing piece in someone else's care.

Paramedical tattoos softened her trauma, and now she eases others' pain

When cancer changes your body, even small touches—like restoring eyebrows or areolas—can make a big difference. Through Sharsheret's financial assistance program, survivors can access free or low-cost paramedical tattooing with artists like Elsa Milani, helping them feel more like themselves again.

Read more in the Chicago Sun-Times about Elsa's journey and how Sharsheret helps with services that are critical to a woman's quality of life and body image.
